EDITORIAL

Why is it that some men of this group insist on acting like a bunch of idiots? We refer to only those few demented individuals who continuously interrupt stage shows with their feeble minded remarks.

Aside from bringing discredit to this Group as a whole, they interfere with those men seeking a little relaxation and entertainment.

The entertainers who were subjected to these verbal lashings have complained to higher headquarters. It now becomes necessary to stop this practice or suffer the cancellation of future stage shows.

The decision is yours to make. Either act like men or suffer the consequences.

FALSE SECURITY

This is what the American Social Hygiene Association has to say on this subject: "Medical inspection creates a false sense of security for men and the community."

READERS COLUMN

Dear Editor:

Why do you waste space in printing letters from the chronic gripes. Seems as though we could use more constructive criticism instead of the usual (censored — Ed).

We can take the blows with the bows — (Ed).

Dear Editor:

When is the Arabian Show with the "coochie dancer" coming to camp?

Anxious.

(Within a few weeks. We're anxious too — Ed).

Dear Editor:

Why is the Group Baseball Team solely composed of a certain clique? I could name fifty men better than the original outfit.

Wondering

(Lt Walsh is trying to meet them. Send them around — Ed).

Dear Editor:

Since we have a wonderful stage and public address system why not organize a course in public speaking or a debating society?

Future Politician.

(Good suggestion. See us at the office — Ed).

Dear Editor:

Why isn't something done about drunkenness at the theatre? A court-martial or two would nip this in the bud.

Tea Drinker

(Those men have upset stomachs, not intoxicated at all — Ed).

Dear Editor:

Is it true that we may move soon? I like our set up here and would hate to leave the house I built.

Uneasy

(Couldn't tell you if we knew but take all rumor with a grain of salt — Ed.)

UNITED

Forgotten petty difference now,
The larger-purpose glows,
The storm is here, a common fear
Its deadly lightning shows.
The ship of state must bear us all
And danger makes us kin,
As one, we all shall rise or fall,
So shall we strive to win.
Our banner's flying at the mast,
Our course lies straight ahead;
The ocean's trough is deep and rough,
The waves are stained with red.
The bond of danger tighter grows,
We serve a common plan;
Send o'er the sea the word that
Are all American.

One hundred million sturdy souls
Once more united stand,
As one you will find them all behind
The banner of our land.
And side by side they work today
In silken garb or rag
And once again our troops of men
Are brothers of the flag.
And from the storm that hovers low,
And from the angry sea
Where dangers lurk and hate's at work,

Shall come new victory.
The flag shall know not race
Nor different bands of men;
A people strong around it shall throng
To ne'er divide again.
